

The Holy See

ADDRESS OF JOHN PAUL II
TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE HELEN CLARK
PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND

Friday, 21 May 2004

Prime Minister,

I am happy to welcome you to the Vatican and through you to greet the people of your nation. New Zealanders have always cherished the fundamental values of freedom, justice and peace. Indeed, in the face of aggression or threat, they have generously sought to defend and promote such rights in the Pacific and beyond.

Today, in our world so troubled by the scourge of racial divisions and conflict, I encourage you and your fellow citizens to foster dialogue. In acknowledging the fundamental God-given dignity of every person, dialogue leads to a recognition of diversity while opening the mind to the mutual acceptance and genuine collaboration demanded by the human family's basic vocation to unity. Upon you and all the people of New Zealand, I cordially invoke the abundant blessings of Almighty

God.
